The final presentation, A focus on emotions versus a focus on individual differences: Does the latter foster a deficit view of language learners? examines the individual difference perspective within second language acquisition and speculates on how this kind of thinking contributes to a deficit view of language learners. It argues that a focus on learners’ authentic emotions fosters more authentic relationships among learners and teachers and cultivates individualized approaches for helping anxious language learners.

Keywords: